GARY A. BOLLES

Chair for the Future of Work, Singularity University.

Gary A. Bolles is a lecturer, writer and consultant on the future of work, learning, and the organization.

His focus is on helping individuals, organizations, communities and countries to thrive in the transition to a digital economy.

He currently serves as Chair for the Future of Work for Singularity University, leading the organization's efforts to empower a global community with the mindset and skillset to create an abundant future of work and learning.

He is also a partner in the San Francisco consulting firm Charrette LLC, helping leaders in corporations, HR departments, non-profits, colleges, government agencies, and communities to develop strategies for the future of work and learning.

He is the catalyst of Fulcrum, a global initiative to develop actionable strategies for the transition to a digital work economy, with its first conference (FulcrumConference.com) held in November 2019 in Detroit.

He is the co-founder of eParachute.com, helping job-hunters & career changers, from youth to 50+, with online and in-person programs, inspired by "What Color Is Your Parachute?", the best-selling career book of all time.

Bolles is the author of nine video courses on LinkedIn Learning, with more than a quarter million students.
